

Style Guide

The system behind the Fall 2026 happy hour front and specialty cocktails reverse. Same tokens as the bottles / wines 5×7 family. Four typefaces. One red. One champagne. Do not invent a fifth color.

BOARD ANATOMY

Every Fall 2026 5×7 card is the same object: charcoal field, 6px Concourse Red rails on the top and bottom edges, and a 1.5px hairline inset 6px from every side. Inner padding is 14–22px. Export at 300 dpi (1500 × 2100) with zoom: 3.125.

Masthead is always centered: wordmark, italic tagline, Cortado title. Body then either splits into two columns (food / pints) or stays a single cocktail list.

Front — Happy Hour. Two-column grid, 20px gutter. Item name and price share a baseline. Description tucks under the name in champagne. Specialty cocktails are not listed here — they get an outlined callout (red stroke, no fill) and a muted “see reverse side” line.

Reverse — Specialty Cocktails. Single column. 12px bowling-ball bullets, odd items red, even items champagne. One shared price at the foot: dollar in Libre Baskerville hot red, giant Bebas numeral in white, italic “each” in champagne, between two 2.5px red rules.

REPEATING PARTS

PART	BUILD IT LIKE THIS
SPECIALTY CALLOUT	fit-content box, 1.5px --red stroke, 2px radius, Bebas 14px / tracking 2px, price in --yellow
SECTION TITLE	Bebas 18px --red-hot, 2px tracking, 2px --rule underline only as wide as the words
MENU ROW	Name left, price right, same line. Description or pint detail on the next line in champagne
COCKTAIL BULLET	12px bowling-ball SVG, 14px left of the name. Alternate --red and --yellow. Not a plain disc
WINE BAND	Full-width, centered, hairline on top. Brand + price in Bebas; varieties in italic Baskerville champagne
PRICE BADGE	Centered, red rules above and below. One price for the whole cocktail list
LEGAL FOOTER	Holiday line in muted, bold 8px. Allergen line in --red-hot, 7.5px. No emoji on print

DO

- Name the item. List the ingredients. Stop.
- Food descriptions in uppercase so they read as a garnish line.
- Cocktail recipes in ordinary sentence case — they are longer and need to breathe.
- Keep prices on the name line, never on the description line.
- Required footer: not valid on holidays, allergen notice.

DO NOT

- Add a fifth typeface, or a new red, gold, or green.
- Fill the specialty callout. It is an outline so the title stays loudest.
- Set descriptions in white. That fights the item names.
- Write “delicious,” “signature,” or exclamation marks. These boards list. They do not sell.
- Put a price on every cocktail if they share one price. The badge is the price.

PRICE CHECK BEFORE THE NEXT PRINT

The front callout currently reads Specialty Cocktails $11. The reverse badge reads $13 each. That is a content error, not a style choice. Confirm the live price before reprinting.
